REPUBLICAN SENATOR ON REPUBLICAN TARIFF.

One of the briefest and one of the best speeches made in the senate against the pending Fordney-McCumber tariff bill was made by Senator George W. Norris (Republican, Nebraska), discussing the rates on shotguns, rifles, etc.

The house bill imposed the following rates: On shotguns valued at more than $5, $1.50 each; valued at more than $5 and not more than $10, $4 each; valued at $10 and not more than $25, $6 each; valued at more than $25, $10 each, with an additional ad valorem rate of 35 per cent, which the senate committee made 45 per cent.

In his best ironical vein, Senator Norris said:

"I am surprised that the senator (Mr. Simmons) does not understand it. Of course, it is not for protection, because we send guns all over the world. We command the world's market in guns. There is no protection in it. It is not for revenue, of course, because none are imported; but the senator forgets—and this applies to a good many other things in this bill—that there is another reason that might have a practical effect, and I am surprised that the senator does not understand it. Has he forgotten the men who are engaged in making guns in this country? Has he forgotten that the war is over and that their market is probably somewhat interfered with, and that they need some assistance from somebody? Does not the senator realize, too, that while there are no guns imported, because they cannot compete with us, there are, nevertheless, people in other countries who make guns?"

"We have this market. We are reaching out to get the balance of the world. We want a tariff away up high so that we can raise the price here and still keep out the foreigner while we go out into the foreigner's country and sell guns at less than cost and put him out of business. We could not do that if we did not have the American fellows here toiling and working to make up here what we lose abroad, and hence we have to have this. It is necessary. If we can raise the tariff high enough to keep out the other fellow, and raise the price here up to the level of the tariff wall and compensate ourselves while we go out and conquer the rest of the world in the gun business, when we have driven the other fellows out of business in their home countries, which may take some time, we can increase the price there. We could not do that without losing some money unless we had this thing in the bill, and so we have it in here."

"It may be pretty hard on the fellows who want to buy guns to shoot prairie dogs and rabbits, but it is a splendid thing for the millionaire who makes the gun. The senator has forgotten about that, and while he is traveling out to gather in the world market we will toil and sweat and work and labor and keep the wolf from his door. That is why we have this tariff, not on gun guns, but on a good many other things. We are going to do the same thing with sewing machines and paints, and a lot of things made out of steel, and a whole lot of other things; and will it not be a glorious day when that time comes, when our millionaires will control the world, and we will go hungry and toil while they are getting around to do it? We ought to be glad of the opportunity to make these sacrifices. We ought to rejoice that we are the instrumentalities by which these men will not only prosper, but continue to prosper. They have us captured now. We want them to capture everybody else, and let everybody pay tribute to their greatness and to their grandeur."

"The senator from North Carolina has not grasped the idea yet. He ought, it seems to me, to be able to understand, and he will when he gets as old as I am and lives as long as I have, that one of the blessings that come to us through such legislation as this is that for every drop of sweat and every bit of toil that our people go through and all the suffering they have to endure they are going to be able to see somebody living high and flying with the geese."

Mondell Sidesteps Smith-McNary Bill.

Republican Floor Leader Mondell, who is one of the most nimble sidestepers and dodgers in the house of representatives, is keeping up that record with reference to the Smith-McNary reclamation bill. Representative Garner (democrat, Texas), did his best the other day to draw from Leader Mondell a statement that the house would be given an opportunity to vote on this bill so greatly desired by the western states, but failed to get any positive declaration from the floor leader.

The merit of this bill and the bill itself were described in a nutshell by Senator Henry F. Ashurst (democrat, Arizona), in a recent speech, in which he said:

"If this congress should fail to pass the Smith-McNary reclamation bill a roar of fury, anger and resentment would rise from every camp, every home, every hamlet, and city in the west. The republican party is bound, as far as faith and promises can bind men, to pass this bill. The proper committee of the house and the proper committee of the senate have recommended it. The bill asks for no gift, no bounty, no largesse from the federal treasury, but it provides that an appropriate sum of money—$350,000,000—shall be transferred to the national reclamation fund and that the secretary of the interior may from time to time designate lands, eligible for reclamation in Mississippi, Montana, Maine, Michigan, Alabama, Arizona, Utah, Arkansas, or in any other state, and that such approved projects shall be built. The money will all be repaid to the United States; hence this is not an appropriation."

 (From The Ohio State Journal (Rep.))

We favor reform from within and our advice to our great party of progress and moral ideas is not to do quite so many things to make Cordell Hull happy.

The republican party, as we have always said, is the party of conservation, and here we find ourselves on the eve of another campaign with almost enough unused campaign promises left over from last time to see us through.

What congress needs, and so we wired our great president in care of Senator Frelinhuysen yesterday, as he didn't seem to have thought of it before, is intimidation.

Princeton university just characterized our great president as a man of immense patience and self-effacing modesty, among other things, as it handed him an honorary degree the other day, but we have our moments of depression, as we watch congress wiggling and wobbling around from day to day, when we wish it might conscientiously have added a little something about how terribly hardboiled he is when occasion demands.

The proof of a people's ignorance lies in the number of things it is afraid to make a joke about.

THIN GRAY LINE RE-FORMING
 AT RICHMOND TODAY
 S. Freeman, editor of the Richmond News Leader will follow, after which United States Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi will be heard. In the afternoon addresses by W. Tate Brady of Oklahoma and Dr. Henry Louis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University and a poem by Mrs. Josie F. Capleman will feature the program.

the veterans will be preceded by formal presentation to the art gallery of R. E. Lee Camp No. 1, Confederate Veterans, in Battle Abbey, of sixteen life-size portraits of Virginians who distinguished themselves in the war between the states. Prominent speakers will present the portraits.

In the late afternoon a reception will be given at the governor's mansion. At the same time exercises with connection with laying a wreath on the Jefferson Davis monument, will be conducted with General Collier presiding.

The Sons of Veterans will hold a business meeting all day tomorrow. Tomorrow's activities will close with a ball at night in which the veterans, the sons and members of the Confederate Memorial association will participate.

Baseball Gossip

From the time Tom Perry and Ernest Oliphant began recounting casualties last night they gained over a hundred. Ernest secured most of his while occupying a bottom position under ten or twelve mullet on the grandstand floor. Tom secured his crowding through the gate.

Legion to Stage Bathing Beauty Picture Parade

On Wednesday evening the American Legion will stage an attraction at the Howell theater that bids fair to be one of the most enjoyable affairs of the kind ever witnessed in Palatka. Bert Hodge post has contracted for the big Mack Sennet comedy feature in five reels, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," with all the stars and bathing beauties of the Sennett organization in the cast.

But the picture is not nearly all of the attractiveness of the program. The piece de resistance will be a bathing beauty parade, in which all the latest designs in bathing suits will be displayed on living models, fifteen of Palatka's daintiest misses wearing them.

Miss Gladys Register will sing a solo, C. H. Dawson will demonstrate what can be done with an accordion, and Galli Knight, McCormack Wright, Caruso Tilghman and Traciari Strunz will put on a 15-minute musical skit.

Miss Clarice Newton will also put on one of her most entrancing interpretative dances, with the assistance of a full orchestra.

New Meat Market Opens to Public

A new meat market has opened up at Lemon and Eleventh streets, with a choice line of fresh meats and garden produce. The proprietors are former Chief of Police Charles Livingston and W. M. Green, an experienced meat cutter. They solicit the patronage of the public.

Chats With Your Gas Man
 If you are using defective gas tubing, discard it. Do not mend it.
 It is criminal carelessness to try to keep in use gas tubing that will permit even an infinitesimal amount of gas to escape, by patching it with tire tape, putty, rags, soap, or bread dough, as has been shown upon investigation to have been done in many instances.
 Worn-out gas tubing should be replaced by purchasing only the best grade of tubing. It may cost a few cents more, but it is worth it.
 Ask for and insist upon having only the highest grade, for such tubing is absolutely odorless and will last longer than the inferior articles which are sold for a cent or two less per foot than the superior make.

 VITRIFIED paving brick are continually examined and re-examined at every stage of manufacture to maintain quality. Every possible barrier is erected to prevent the shipment of any but durable brick for paving purposes. Four times, during the process of manufacture, each brick is inspected individually, and any that are imperfect are cast aside. Finally, after manufacture, the entire surviving output again is rigidly graded according to quality for paving.
VITRIFIED Brick PAVEMENTS are laid with brick which amount to only eighty per cent of the entire kiln output. The other twenty per cent are considered inferior for pavements and are never offered for sale for pavement construction. The taxpayer relies upon the Standard Rattler Test of the American Society for Testing Materials, to protect his interests by insuring, at all times, durable paving brick. Paving brick are tested officially in this "rattler," a revolving steel barrel in which iron balls inflict a punishment on the brick far more severe than they will receive in streets of the heaviest traffic. You should know—and recognize the importance to you of this fact—that brick is the only paving material which is tested in the precise form, substance and condition in which it is laid in the roadway.
